

Dr. Jianping Huang received his BS in 1982 from Nanjing Institute of Meteorology and MS in 1986 from Lanzhou Plateau Institute of Atmospheric Physics of Chinese Academy. He received his Ph.D. in 1989 from Lanzhou University. Dr. Huang is a Distinguished Professor and the Dean of College of Atmospheric Sciences at Lanzhou University since 2004. He is also the Director and Chief Scientist of Key Laboratory for Semi-Arid Climate Change (SACOL), Ministry of Education, China. Dr. Huang's research fields are in the areas of cloud/aerosol/radiation/climate interactions, atmospheric remote sensing, and climate change detection.

