

Zhien Wang, University of Wyoming

Dr. Zhien Wang received his BS in 1990 from Anhui Normal University, MS in 1994 from Anhui Institute of Optics and Fine Mechanics, Chinese Academy of Sciences, and Ph.D. in 2000 from University of Utah. Dr. Wang is an associate professor and NSF Wyoming King Air facility chief scientist at Department of Atmospheric Science, University of Wyoming. His research focuses on airborne instrument development and on cloud observations and process studies with multi-remote sensor from ground and satellite as well as integrated airborne remote sensing and in situ sampling. Dr. Wang is member of AMS, and AGU, as well as science team member for DOE ASR and NASA CloudSat and CALIPSO program. Dr. Wang received NASA group achievement award and NSF CAREER award, published more than 60 papers.